1. In August 1951, [Redacted] in Rodbav (R 36/R 71) [Redacted] the Rumanian troop training grounds near Cincul (R 36/R 71) were occupied by Rumanian troops. The troops were quartered in the villages around the troop training grounds as they had been in 1950. During the summer months, they moved to wooden barracks and tent camps, but after completion of the fall maneuvers they departed. The detraining station for troop trains was in Voila (R 35/W 79). It had a long side ramp which showed no changes prior to August 1951. Only a few Rumanian soldiers who had horse drawn vehicles were billeted in Rodbav in August 1951. They transported water to the troop units quartered at the troop training grounds. New wooden structures to quarter soldiers were constructed in the wooded area 3 km southwest of Rodbav in 1951. They were constructed on the edge of the woods for concealment and were camouflaged with moss. They were small, having a length of about 15 meters and had two chimneys. As they extended into the woods, [Redacted] 25X1
 [Redacted] A group of similar but smaller quarters of this type was on the edge of the woods about 3 km north of Cincsor (R 35/R 70) on the east bank of the Cincul Mare River. Five or six large wooden barracks occupied by Rumanian soldiers were on the road from Cincul toward northwest in August 1951. No heavy weapons, motorized vehicles or air activity were observed in Rodbav in August 1951. *
 2. In September 1951, the former Jaeger Barracks in Fagaras (R 35/R 80) quartered Rumanian soldiers who wore new uniforms. [Redacted] 25X1
 [Redacted] there were no heavy weapons or motorized vehicles there. There were horses in the installation. The installation was located in the south-eastern sector of the town on the south side of the road to Stalin (R 35/X 37). Formerly, it was the billet of a rifle regiment. [Redacted] 25X1

25X1 3. [] Rumanian soldiers with red or blue epaulets in Fagaras in August 1951. The soldiers wearing red epaulets outnumbered those wearing blue epaulets. [] the residents of the town would always refer to the troops as infantry. The troops were quartered in an old installation in the southeastern sector of the city where Rumanian infantry had been quartered prior to World War II. No soldiers with motor vehicles were seen in or around the city.

4. Young men of 19 or 20 years of age from Cincsor in about November 1950 had to report to a recruiting office in Fagaras for registration. They were inducted either in the spring or the summer of 1951 in Fagaras and from there were sent to their respective posts. None of these soldiers or of those who had been inducted in the fall of 1950 were seen on furlough in their home town until September 1951. They had been forbidden to write where they were stationed.

25X1 5. [] in the vicinity of the post, there was an installation which was referred to by the population as a powder factory. A large number of young Germans who lived in Fagaras were drafted to work in this plant which was south or southeast of the city.

[] 6. No military quarters were known in Sighisoara (R 36/R 74) prior to 9 December 1951. Scarcely any soldiers were seen in the town.

25X1 7. A large number of Rumanian troop trains were seen near Gata (R 36/S 12) on the railroad line from Stalin to Sighisoara proceeding toward Sighisoara in June 1951. The trains carried trucks which appeared to be new, guns and, in some instances, tanks.

8. With the exception of installations of the Rumanian Air Force, there had been no units of the Rumanian Army in Medias (R 36/R 44) prior to November 1951.  The security office was located on former Rotgasse. A headquarters of the Militia was located on the market square. Militia personnel wore blue uniforms and visor-type caps with a large star. There were no security troops in Medias. No Militia units or security units were in Agnita (R 36/R 61) prior to November 1951. No barracks installations were available.
